TROOPS OPEN CAMP AUGUST 7

MAJ. GEN. WILSON EXPECTS TO HAVE 5,000 MEN IN TRAINING HERE THIS YEAR

In two weeks Michigan troops again will be on the march for the state encampment at Grayling, where for 20 days or more they will undergo annual intensive training.

War department orders received recently by Major-General Guy M. Wilson, commander of the thirty-second division, staff officers and regimental commanders, direct that the camp shall open August 7. From that day until the entire Michigan National Guard is under canvas on the shores of Lake Michigan, approximately 1,000 men a day will detrain at the Grayling military siding. It is estimated more than 5,000 will be mustered.

General Staff Personnel

Major-General Wilson will command the camp. On the general staff are Colonel John Bersey, adjutant general; Lieutenant-Colonel LeRoy Pearson, chief of staff; Lieutenant-Colonel Samuel D. Pepper, judge advocate; Lieutenant-Colonel Glenn B. Arnold, chief signal officer; Lieutenant-Colonel James Sinke, personnel officer; Lieutenant-Colonel John H. Stick, plans and training officer, and Lieutenant-Colonel O. H. Tower, finance officer.

Troops have been preparing for the event with more than usual activity. Recruiting is on in all army stations throughout the state and nearly all Detroit units are up to full strength.

The 182nd field artillery, under Colonel Heinrich A. Pickert, this year will undertake one of the most ambitious projects in the history of the Michigan National Guard. Under full equipment and at full strength, the "million dollar" artillery will march from Detroit to Grayling, a distance of approximately 200 miles.

The train of the unit will be more than a mile in length and will comprise four batteries of 155 millimeter howitzers and a headquarters battery. The big guns will be hauled the distance by tractors, while other rolling equipment of the regiment includes trucks, observation cars, automobiles and motorcycles. The entire outfit is motorized.

The two Michigan infantries are veteran war units of the thirty-second division. Last year one of the features of the encampment was the ceremony at which the colors of the 126th were decorated with the croix de guerre of the 106th cavalry, which last year was pronounced one of the most proficient cavalry units in the country, will enter 1926 training with a crack organization. This troop and headquarters of the 106th are from Detroit. The cavalry regiment is commanded by Major Harold Rehber of Royal Oak.

Like the artillery, the cavalry this year will undertake a trek to the northern encampment. The regiment will assemble at Alma, Mich., the home of troop C, and from there will march to Grayling. Troop A, of South Haven will transport horses and men from their home station to Alma by train.

The 107th medical regiment is recruited to full strength and will detrain August 6, according to an announcement by Colonel John D. Buck, its commanding officer. A customary part of the annual training of this unit is the establishment, maintenance and operation of the hospital. The work handled at the hospital is equivalent to that of any similar institution in a city of 6,000 people. All camp sick and accident cases are cared for there.

Established Milk Clinic

Besides routine work, the 107th medical regiment last year established a clinic at which all milk entering the encampment was tested daily. Problems of water medication, which have been solved effectively, and other health measures are a part of the work of the regiment through the accomplishment of which its personnel becomes trained in medical practice as it pertains to the armies in the field.

The regiment is officered by leading physicians and surgeons of Detroit. Nearly every large city of the state will be represented at the encampment. The 126th infantry, with headquarters at Grand Rapids, draws its troops from cities and towns throughout the west and north central parts of the state. The regiment is commanded by Colonel Campbell.

From Lansing last year, the 119th field artillery, under Colonel Joseph Lewis, trekked into camp after a forced march over a greater part of the distance.

Ambulance units, machine gun battalions, the signal corps, which hails from Ypsilanti, headquarters troops and other organizations which go to make up a division, were included in the general order for the encampment. All will go through the annual training at Grayling which has made the Michigan National Guard an effective military unit.

Following the promotion of Brig.-Gen. Wilson to Major-General, likewise Colonel Scouten has been advanced to the rank of Brig.-General.

The first to arrive will be the advance units, the earliest of these being scheduled to reach camp at 7:45 a. m., August 2. Others will arrive August 3rd, 4th and 6th, respectively. The 182nd field artillery of Detroit, under command of Colonel Pickert, will motor to camp via Waterford, Clio, Midland, Gladwin and Roscommon, spending Sunday at Roscommon. The 119th, that last year trekked to camp from Sterling, this year will arrive by train August 5th.

The 106th cavalry of Detroit and Troop A, South Haven, 106th cavalry will go to Alma by train and from there will trek to camp Grayling, via Alma, Shepherd, Rosebush, Harrison, Houghton Lake and Roscommon, spending Sunday in Harrison.

Other units and detachments will arrive via train.

LOG CABIN OFFICE BUILDING OF E. M. T. DEDICATED BY OFFICERS

The log cabin which will house the administrative offices of the East Michigan Tourist association and the Northeastern Michigan Development bureau at Bay City has been dedicated.

The ceremony took place Tuesday afternoon, July 20, in a searching sun. Members of the executive committee of the tourist association and of the board of directors of the development bureau to the number of about 20 took part in the ceremony. Motion pictures were taken and will be shown in theaters in many cities and towns in the district.

Those officers of the two organizations who were present were the guests of the Rotary club at luncheon Tuesday. Following the luncheon short business session was held. At this meeting, two officers were added to each association. The name of Morton H. Wheeler, secretary of the Mount Clemens board of commerce, was substituted for a retiring member on the board of directors of the East Michigan Tourist association, and the name of H. H. Stickfort of Oscoda was added to the executive committee of the development bureau.

At the business meeting September 9 and 10 were set as the dates for the three-day annual forestry excursion which will be held under the auspices of the East Michigan Tourist association in co-operation with the Michigan Department of Conservation. Colonel W. B. Greeley of Washington, D. C., in charge of American Forestry Service, will be one of the guests of honor on the excursion. It is expected that other prominent national figures, including congressmen and senators, with state officials will also participate in the excursion. The excursion will probably start at East Tawas and visits will be made during the three days to the Michigan National forest and to state forest areas, Alpena, West Branch, Grayling, Gaylord and other points will be visited. Michigan's first annual forestry excursion is an aftermath of the 1926 Michigan observance of "American Forestry Week," of which T. F. Marston was Michigan chairman.

The dedication of the building was in charge of Herman Lundin, president of the Northeastern Michigan Development bureau. Pictures of the directors were taken as they shunted logs into place for the foundation of the building. Many of those partici-patting were garbed in overalls and jumpers, khaki breeches, etc. Canteens were supplied the workers by the Jennison Hardware Co., the officers marching there to secure their tools. Rev. Henry Kreulen of Bay City asked the benediction of God on the enterprise.

Those taking part in the dedication were: Judge Isaac Foster of Gladwin; Herman Lundin of Gaylord and Lewiston; James R. Snody of Onaway; J. Emmet Richards of Alpena; Harvey Campbell, executive vice president of the Detroit Board of Commerce; Leslie D. Madill and Burt Green of Midland; Frank A. Hewitt of Bay City; John Yuill of Vanderbilt; W. B. Holden, Detroit; Marius Hanson, Grayling; T. F. Marston, Bay City; Senator H. S. Karcher, Rose City; W. A. Crandell, West Branch; D. Eugene Matheson, Roscommon; Morton H. Wheeler, Mount Clemens; Herman Butler, East Tawas; Harvey Campbell Sr., and Harry Babcock, Detroit.

Some of the directors who attended brought with them from their respective counties stones to be used in the construction of the huge fireplace which will decorate one end of the large room. Others will be donated by counties not represented.

The cement floor of the building has been laid and construction of the outer walls of the log cabin is now well under way.

A lot of men who have graduated from the school of experience are still paying their back tuition.—Binghamton Press.

POINCARÉ RULE IS FAVORED BY FRENCH

New Cabinet Is Regarded as Competent to Solve Financial Problems.

Washington.—American tourists should remain out of France, if the outbreaks against them and against the United States continue, according to Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania. Senator Reed in effect would have Americans boycott France for the time being unless the outbreak halt.

Paris.—The name of Raymond Poincaré is on the lips of almost every Frenchman. Literally the entire nation breathed a sigh of relief at the news that one of the most dangerous national crises in the history of the country had definitely passed with the formation of a National Union ministry, headed by the distinguished ex-president of the republic.

The political effectiveness and ominous civic unrest which began with the crash of the Briand-Caillaux ministry a few days ago, and the precipitate fall of the franc which followed the political maelstrom that swept in and swept out Herriot, are gone.

M. Poincaré, who has succeeded in welding the political parties into a sacred crusade against national bankruptcy, received President Doumergue's benediction in his threefold responsibility—as premier, minister of finance and minister of the liberated regions.

Excluded from his ministry alone are the pure radicals of the right and left, despite the fact that he sought their collaboration, even urging the brilliant Socialist deputy, Paul Boncour, to take a cabinet post.

M. Poincaré will command an overwhelming vote of confidence in both legislative branches. His strength in the chamber of deputies was assured when the radical-socialists, at first bent on destructive opposition in revenge for the fall of their leader, Edouard Herriot, bowed to the impatient and even threatening public opinion and agreed to support the new ministry with M. Herriot, holding the relatively insignificant post of minister of public instruction.

The new cabinet is as follows: Premier and Minister of Finance—Raymond Poincaré.

Minister of Justice—Louis Barthou. Foreign Affairs—Aristide Briand. Interior—Albert Sarraut. War—Paul Painlevé.

Marine—Georges Leygues. Public Works—Maurice Bokanowski. Education—Edouard Herriot. Commerce—André Tardieu. Colonies—Leon Perrier.

Pensions—Louis Marin. Agriculture—Jr. André Queuille. Labor—André Fallières.

Such a ministry in any other country than France would endure for years, but in this case, it is uniquely designed to solve France's financial difficulties and then will disband, leaving politics thereafter to continue on its normal way.

What will be the new ministry's exact program for financial recovery cannot yet be traced with detailed accuracy. One thing is certain, it will not make any immediate move to ratify the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement, but national economy has become a leading feature of its policy.

The arrival in France of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon of Washington has aroused great interest, despite the claim that he is merely vacationing. The opinion of the French press is that:

"In reality, Mr. Mellon has crossed the Atlantic to examine the economic and financial situation of Europe at the moment of crisis. There are many reasons for these crises and the policies which rest upon them are not matters of indifference to the United States government.

"Mr. Mellon is also anxious to calm down the controversy between Mr. Churchill and himself before it seriously affects the relations between the two great Anglo-Saxon powers."

Illinois Senatorial Vote to Be Recounted

Chicago.—Judge Jereck of the county court announced that in accordance with the request of Senator James Reed, Democrat of Missouri, he had ordered a complete recount of both Democratic and Republican votes cast in the Illinois senatorial primary of April.

Senator Reed is chairman of the senate "slush fund" investigation committee which is now conducting hearings in Chicago, sessions which propose to turn the spotlight on alleged political irregularities in connection with the primary.

"In all respects," Senator Reed said, "it will be carried on in the same thorough way in which the Pennsylvania hearings were conducted. We will endeavor to learn the inside facts of the Illinois primary, particularly as it affects candidates for the United States senate."

Canoe Upsets, 11 Boys Drown
Petersboro, Ont.—Eleven boys of the St. Andrew's camp were drowned in Balsam lake, near here, when a war canoe containing sixteen upset. Five struggled to shore.

Refused Army Airplanes
Washington.—Secretary Davis has replied unfavorably to the request of officials of the naval carnival to be held at Hampton Roads, Va., for the participation of army aircraft in exhibition flights.

Principal Events In Grayling 25 Years Ago

INTERESTING ITEMS OF NEWS GATHERED FROM THE FILES OF THE AVALANCHE OF 25 YEARS AGO.

Mrs. A. J. Rose has been spending a few days in Gaylord.

K. Meyers left for Chicago and the Pan-American.

Chas. Marvin entertained Mr. McGuigans of Frederic last Sunday.

Mrs. Rolla Brink and the baby went to the old home at Bay Port last week for a visit.

Joseph Burton has made his residence premises bright as new with fresh paint.

County Clerk Collen and family are taking a little vacation on Portage Lake.

Miss L. E. Williams went to Detroit and Tekonsha Tuesday for a short business trip.

The families of William, Charles and George McCullough are camping out at Portage.

Mrs. C. T. Jerome and Miss Williams spent a few days at Mackinac Island last week.

Mrs. Charles Tromble and Miss Ethel took in the excursion to Cheboygan last Sunday.

Red raspberries are coming into the market and are reported to be a large crop.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mantz of Lewiston stopped over one train on their return from Milwaukee last week.

Mrs. H. E. Hilliker and Mrs. Lucy Bradshaw of Bay City, mother and aunt of Mrs. T. A. Carney came up for a little visit Monday. They go from here to Mackinaw.

The masons are started on the second story of the jail and the sheriff's residence, the brick work of which will be about completed this week, if it don't rain.

K. Hanson can be credited with laying the first cement walk at Grayling and his example is being followed by N. P. Olson and N. Michelson.

Ambrose Cross has closed out his business at Millersburg and returned to Grayling, the best town in the state.

Miss Martha Mantz stopped off here for a visit on her way home to Lewiston from Milwaukee where she has been visiting for the past six weeks.

Mr. Efner Matson and family are enjoying a two weeks visit in the southern part of the state. Chas. Cowell is working in the barber shop during Mr. Matson's absence.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Brott and Mrs. Ray Brott and children of Tekonsha arrived Tuesday morning for a week's visit with the family of S. B. Brott of Beaver Creek.

Mrs. Sadie Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Wisner arrived Tuesday morning from Coldwater, also Mrs. George Adams and daughter, sister of Mrs. J. Burton for a few weeks' visit.

Chas. Kelley the enterprising merchant from Frederic was in town Saturday. He says he is not after congressional honors, but as he favors expansion he will erect a large new store building in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Jones with L. T. Wright and wife took a run down the river Saturday, returning in time for business Monday morning. We have not heard any fish stories but all report an elegant time.

W. J. and E. L. McQueen have shied their cauter into the newspaper arena and sent out the Hillman Herald, a six column quarto, neat in its make-up and well filled with local news. We wish them success.

The M. C. R. R. will give a grand excursion to Bay City and Saginaw, Sunday, August 4, leaving Grayling at 7 o'clock p. m. Fare for round trip, Bay City, $1.25; Saginaw, $1.40. Bicycles and baby carriages free.

A literary society was organized at the Benedict school house in Beaver Creek Saturday evening, July 27th, with the following officers: Lewis E. Parker, president; George A. Belmont, vice president; Miss Vena Benedict, secretary.

The Hanson Lumber Company, successor to R. O. Crump & Sons, is very busy making changes toward greater perfection in the factory. The new company has sent on several of the old heads, mechanics, in the confidence of the head of the company, and while no information is being given out, there is an impression on board of our old heads that the new people are going to make that large establishment hum as it never hummed before, and that every possible encouragement ought to be given to them to make the already extensive plant one of the greatest in the state.

—Roscommon News.

Judge Sharpe will go into the convention with more delegates than any other candidate outside of Bay county—a most creditable showing for Ogemaw's choice, and a strong argument for the northern counties to unite on him to defeat Bay.—West Branch Herald Times.

The particulars of the death of Alonzo Purchase at Minneapolis last week have been received. He was switching in the yard and his right foot caught in the frog throwing him onto the track so that his right leg was cut in two.

The courthouse is about ready for the corner-stone which is on the ground. We do not hear that it will be laid with any imposing ceremony, and have not heard what the committee have decided to enclose in its vault. We would suggest that in addition to the usual official documents that the several civic societies, by their secretaries, furnish a list of their officers and members at this date.

F. Peck took a load of our people out to Portage Lake to attend the special services at Gimmebaugh's mill last Friday evening.

NEW COTTAGES BEING BUILT ON NORTH BRANCH

Two fine new summer homes are being built on the North Branch south of Lovells by F. B. Squire and son R. R. Squire on the east side of the river, and F. B. Squire and son-in-law, J. F. Rust, on the north side of the river. Nearly $100,000 is being invested in these properties, which promise to be delightful summer homes. They are being constructed of pine logs, the work being in charge of Adam Herdline and his crew of workmen. Mr. Squire resides in Cleveland and is vice president of the Standard Oil Co. They have been coming to the North Branch for 25 years and stopping at the Douglas hotel in Lovells. They claim that that stream is the finest trout stream in America and think so much of it that they are providing permanent summer homes upon it.

TRANSFER PROPERTIES FROM DIST. 4 TO DIST. 5

Acting upon petitions filed by Arthur Wakeley and Mr. Knight of school district No. 4 of Grayling township, the board at their meeting last week Friday night, granted the transfer. An effort was recently made to consolidate these districts, the election carrying unanimously in District No. 5, but lost by one vote in No. 4. Inasmuch as the district failed in the matter of consolidation the board concluded there was ample cause for granting the transfer of the Wakeley and Knight property, and voted unanimously in favor of it.

AMERICANS IN EUROPE

Some indication of the prosperity of the American people may be had through the reports from Europe to the effect that the capitals and resorts of the old world are fairly teeming with visitors from the Western Hemisphere. The influx of the Americans is especially noticeable, it is said, in France and Great Britain. Paris, as usual gets the most American money, and tourists are having an especially good time there on account of the present lowly condition of the franc. But London, too, is getting its share of these trans-oceanic visitors. In fact, one British newspaper recently printed a cartoon of the Strand, London's popular thoroughfare, under the title "Find the Englishman." The Englishman could be seen emerging from the coal cellar and the thoroughfare itself was crowded with Americans.

This migration of American tourists to Europe is significant in two ways. First it shows that the United States is really prosperous. These tourists are not all wealthy by any means. Many of them are teachers and other citizens in the modest walks of life. The fact that they can go and spend their money shows how widely prosperity is diffused in America. This flood of visitors abroad proves another thing. It shows that Americans are not self-centered and isolated. Each year they are travelling more and more at home and abroad. They are learning about their neighbors in other states and about the people in other lands. And this travelling is giving them breadth and additional understanding. It is now the Europeans who, for various reasons are staying at home.

Most valuable of all, this travelling gives the average American an understanding of the real worth of America. He is finding after all that his own country is the best in which to live, because of the greater opportunity for individual development. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred he comes back home better satisfied with the fact that he is an American.

A vacation would be all right if it were not for the first day or two at the office after you get back home.

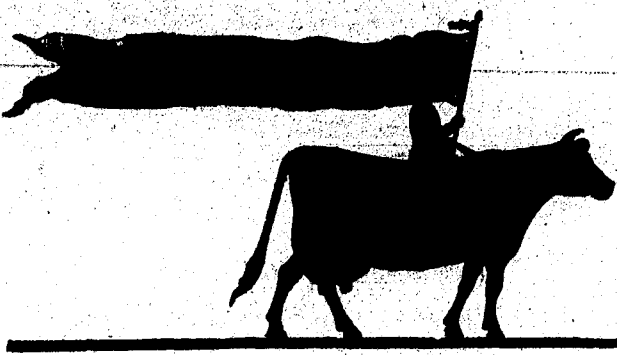

Angora, Turkey has no theaters, night clubs or cabarets. We'll bet the traveling men always avoid Angora as a place to spend the week end.

It is understood that Brazil will send its delegates home from Geneva at once and will not wait for the customary two years. Having found out that there is no Santa Claus at Geneva the Brazilians evidently feel that there is no use hanging around.

England and Wales together have averaged 150 murders per year for the past century. Which explains why the average Chicagoan finds Great Britain so quiet, uneventful a place.

Farm Bureau Notes

R. D. Bailey, Co. Agricultural Agent

Installs Milking Machine

Another of our progressive young farmers has moved ahead. Mr. John McGillis of County Line Farm, east of Roscommon, has installed a DeLaval milking machine.

John says that if he "snaps into it," he can milk the whole herd of 15 cows in 30 minutes; that the machine works good, and that his only kick is he did not put it in earlier in the spring. If he had he could have got the spring work done nearer on time.

The milker is piped up to allow an increase in the herd. We believe that John is right in installing the machine and in planning on enlarging the herd. A man might just as well have enough cows to make a business of it.

The number of pure bred in Mr. McGillis' herd is rapidly increasing. The above is a type of news that your county agent delights to report. In the midst of a period of agricultural depression, while so many are in despair, and so many are leaving their farms, it is refreshing and heartening to see someone hang on and actually increase his farm operations.

They Attend Farm Women's Institute
Mrs. Hugo Schreiber Jr. and Mrs. Charles Corwin are in attendance at a week's program arranged for farm women at Michigan State College (Agricultural College).

Here they will see demonstrations, hear valuable lectures and concerts, revel in the beauty of the 80-acre campus (not surpassed in the United States) and become better acquainted with this wholesome and noble institution that is so near the needs and problems of the people.

This "Farm Women's Institute" lasts from July 24 to July 30, inclusive, closing on July 30 with the great annual summer event, "Farmers' Day."

Mr. Charles Corwin will drive down to participate in Farmers' Day and will be accompanied home by Mrs. Corwin and Mrs. Schreiber. County Agent Called to State College
Your county agent, in common with the other county agents of the state is instructed to be at Michigan State College (Agricultural College) to attend a meeting on Friday when plans will be formulated by which all county agents will get their people out to the National Dairy show to be held at the state fair grounds in Detroit, October 6 to 13. Thus, the agent will be out of town Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

Gets Reward

Mr. George Annis has cut and put into the barn about 16 tons of splendid alfalfa hay from his 3-acre field. He is reaping his reward for his faith in alfalfa, and for the considerable amount of money and labor advanced and risked in buying Grimm alfalfa seed, lime and fertilizer. We are heartily glad to see this heavy cut of hay. If the weather is right there will be a second crop this year.

Not only does a farmer get two crops of alfalfa a year, but if he keeps June grass down by dragging as soon as he takes hay off, he will cut that field many years.

More than that, too, a farmer should remember that alfalfa is the most nutritious hay there is, almost hay and grain combined. He should remember too, the benefit that alfalfa is to his soil.

Science Comes to Farmers' Rescue
No longer do farmers have to helplessly endure some things that used to cause them losses. Science has found ways to prevent a lot of farmers' troubles.

Some farmers will never use these advanced methods. Some will. More and more they will come into common practice.

In testing soil last week we found a farmer's growing oats badly infested with smut. This disease utterly ruins the oat crop and could have been prevented at the cost of one cent a bushel by simple methods that I have repeatedly mailed to every farmer in the county.

Just Now

Just now the pests that need attention are cut worms, cabbage worms, striped cucumber beetle and onion maggot.

Skilled Men

Men (entomologists, bug specialists, insect specialists) who will know their business recommend the following for:

Cut Worms

Make poison bait by thoroughly mixing two level tablespoonsful of white arsenic or paris green with five pounds dry bran. Add three quarts water in which half a pint of cheap molasses has been mixed. Let stand all day. After supper scatter around stems of plants to be protected. This mash is poisonous. Young children, livestock and poultry should be kept away from it.

Hand picking of cutworms also helps. They usually conceal themselves near base of the plant which they have destroyed, and may be found curled up about an inch below surface of ground, within 3 to 4 inches of cut plant.

Common Cabbage Worm
Spray with arsenate of lead. Use one ounce lead arsenate paste to one gallon water to which add an inch cube cheap soap well dissolved. The soap makes spray stick on the waxy leaves.
Striped Cucumber Beetle

(1st Way). Arsenate of lead as for potato bugs.
(2nd Way). Cheesecloth over each hill of cucumbers, held up by wire or pieces of barrel hoop.
(3rd Way). One pound flowers of sulphur with three pounds air slacked or hydrated lime. Dust on, through three or four thicknesses of cheesecloth when leaves are wet with dew. Repeat, of course.

Onion Maggot
These maggots hatch out of eggs laid by a certain kind of fly. The idea is to kill the fly.
Make poisoned spray of one-fifth ounce sodium arsenate dissolved in one gallon boiling water. Add pint cheap molasses. Apply in large, scattering drops, by dipping old broom into mixture and scattering on onion tops, grass, weeds, crops, for rod or two each side of onions.
Flies get this before reaching onions. Renew at least twice a week, more often if it rains.

DRAKE, AGRICULTURAL AGENT IS BUSY IN N. E. MICHIGAN

L. L. Drake, agricultural specialist and working in the district of the Northeastern Michigan Development bureau with which organization he has an office at Bay City, for the past two weeks has been giving his attention to agricultural projects in six counties—Cheboygan, Presque Isle, Alcona, Oscoda, Arenac and Iosco.

This promotional work ranges from seed potatoes, alfalfa and other products to the establishment of foundation herds of purebred cattle, broadening of dairy projects, and starting two testing associations.

Mr. Drake's assistance and counsel have been much in demand in the entire district since he began work in this section. His co-operation has already resulted in many progressive projects in agriculture, which have resulted in the hearty commendation of farmers and county officials.

Counties which desire his services and advice may reach him by addressing him care of the Northeastern Michigan Development bureau.

APPLE CROP MENACED BY RE- TURN OF MAGGOT

East Lansing, July 20.—The apple maggot is back again. Adult flies of this year's brood emerged in Ingham county on July 16, and word is being sent out from the Michigan State College that now is the time to make spray applications for control of this fruit pest.

The damage from apple maggot is done by the burrowing of the larvae in the flesh of the apple. Fruit infested with the maggot drops from the tree; the maggot gets into the soil and passes the winter in the resting stage. During June and July, the fly comes out ready to lay eggs in the apple. This is the time to apply sprays.

All apples, except early varieties, which are too near picking time, should be sprayed immediately with a spray made up of one and one-half pounds of dry powdered lead arsenate to 60 gallons of water. Orchards in northern Michigan may be sprayed a little later. Stock which will eat the infested apples which fall from the trees should be run in the orchards, or the fallen apples picked up daily and fed to stock.

Professor R. H. Pettit, Michigan State College, states that these control measures will successfully combat this pest which has re-appeared in numbers after an absence of twenty-five years. The larvae of the apple maggot may be easily distinguished from that of the common codling moth. The codling moth larvae has six legs and a distinct brownish head. The larvae of the apple maggot has no legs and no distinct head.

QUACK GRASS NAMED WITH WORST WEEDS

East Lansing, July 20.—Quack grass is rated one of Michigan's worst weed pests by crops men at the state college. The mere appearance of small patches on unfertilized farms brings alarm to those who know its habits of growth.

While there is no easy way to handle this tenacious pest, there are effective methods of control which can be followed out successfully. The following outline for quack grass control is given by Prof. J. F. Cox, farm crops department at the college.

"Quack grass can be controlled, on a field scale, only by effective plowing and cultivation at the right time. If quack grass is in sod form or well distributed over your fields, it would be advisable to plow in late July or early August to a shallow depth three or four inches, or barely turning sod. The field should then be disced and cross-disced with discs set almost straight so as to cut sod into pieces. After drying, the quack grass (sod and roots) should be raked together and burned.

"Every ten days or two weeks the field should be harrowed with spring-tooth harrow, or disced after rains which cake the surface. The next spring the field should be plowed as early as possible to depth of seven to nine inches and planted to a cultivated crop such as corn or beans. The cultivated crop should be given thorough cultivation and gone over with sharp hoes to get quack grass where ever it is in the rows."

Chapter XVI

A strange humor possessed Carvel as he began the southward journey. He did not believe in omens, good or bad. Superstition had played a small part in his life, but he possessed both curiosity and a love for adventure, and his years of lonely wandering had developed in him a completely clear mental vision of things, which in other words might be called singularly active imagination. He knew that some irresistible force was drawing Baree back into the south—that it was pulling him not only along a given line of the compass, but to an exact point in that line. For no reason in particular the situation began to interest him more and more, and as his time was valueless, and he had no fixed destination in view, he began to experiment. For the first two days he marked the dog's course by compass. It was due southeast. On the third morning Carvel purposely struck a course straight west. He noted quickly the change in Baree—his restlessness at first, and after that the dejected manner in which he followed at his heels. Toward noon Carvel swung sharply to the south and east again, and almost immediately Baree regained his old eagerness, and ran ahead of his master.

After this, for many days, Carvel followed the trail of the dog.

"Mebby I'm an idiot, old chap," he apologized one evening. "But it's a bit of fun, after all—'I've got to hit the line of rail before I can get over to the mountains, so what's the difference? I'm game—so long as you don't take me back to that chap at Lac Bain. Now—what the devil! Are you hitting for his trap-line to get even? If that's the case—"

He blew out a cloud of smoke from his pipe as he eyed Baree, and Baree, with his head between his forepaws, eyed him back.

A week later Baree answered Carvel's question by swinging westward to give a wide berth to Post Lac Bain. It was mid-afternoon when they crossed the trail along which Bushy McTaggart's traps and deadfalls had been set. Baree did not even pause. He headed due south, traveling so fast that at times he was lost to Carvel's sight. A surprised but intense excitement possessed him, and he whined whenever Carvel stopped to rest—at ways with his nose sniffing the wind out of the south. Springtime, the flowers, the earth turning green, the singing of birds, and the sweet breaths in the air were bringing him back to that great yesterday when he had belonged to Nepeese. In his unreasonable mind there existed no longer a winter. The long months of cold and hunger were gone; in the new visions that filled his brain there were forgotten. The birds and flowers and the blue skies had come back, and with them the Willow must surely have returned, and she was waiting for him now, just over there beyond that rim of green forest.

Something greater than mere curiosity began to take possession of Carvel. A whimsical humor became a fixed and deeper thought, an unreasonable anticipation that was accompanied by a certain thrill of subdued excitement. By the time they reached the old beaver-pond the mystery of the strange adventure had a firm hold on him. From Beaver-tooth's colony Baree led him to the creek along which Wakayoo, the black bear, had fished, and thence straight to the Gray Loom.

It was early afternoon of a wonderful day. It was so still that the rippling waters of spring, singing in a thousand rills and streamlets, filled the forests with a droning music. In the warm sun the crimson hickories glowed like blood. In the open spaces the air was scented with the perfume of Blue Flowers. In the trees and bushes many birds were building their nests. After the long siege of winter Nature was at work in all her glory. It was Unkenstein, the Matting Moon, the Home Building Moon—and Baree was going home. Not to matehood—but to Nepeese. He knew that she was there now, perhaps at the very edge of the chasm where he had seen her last. They would be playing together again soon, as they had played yesterday, and the day before, and the day before that, and in his joy he barked up into Carvel's face and urged him to greater speed. Then they came to the clearing, and once more Baree stood like a rock. Carvel saw the charred ruins of the burned cabin, and a moment later the two graves under the tall spruce. He began to understand as his eyes returned slowly to the waiting, listening dog. A great swelling rose in his throat, and after a moment or two he said softly, and with an effort, "Boy, I guess you're home."

Baree did not hear. With his head up and his nose lifted to the blue sky he was sniffing the air. What was it that came to him with the perfumes of the forests and the green meadow? Why was it that he trembled now as he stood there? What was there in the air? Carvel asked himself, and his questioning eyes tried to answer the questions. Nothing. There was death—death and desertion, that was all. And then, all at once, there came from Baree a strange cry—almost a human cry—and he was gone like the wind. Carvel had thrown off his pack. He dropped his rifle beside it now, and followed Baree. He ran swiftly, straight across the open, into the two big lawns, and into a grassy path that had once been worn by the travel of feet. He ran until he was panting for breath, and then he stopped and looked back. He could hear nothing of Baree. But that old worn trail led on under the forest trees, and he followed it.

Close to the deep, dark pool in which he and the Willow had disappeared so often—Baree, too, had stopped. He could hear the rippling of water, and his eyes shone with a gleaming fire as he gazed at Nepeese. He expected to see her there, her slim white body shimmering in some dark shadow of overhanging spruce, or gleaming suddenly white as snow in one of the warm splashes of sunlight. His eyes sought out their old hiding places; the great split rock on the other side, the shelving banks under which they used to dive like otter, the spruce boughs that dipped down to the surface, and in the midst of which the Willow loved to screen her naked body while he searched the pool for her. And at last the realization was borne upon him that she was not there, that he had still farther to go.

He went on to the tepee. The little open space in which they had built their hidden wigwam was flooded with sunshine that came through a break in the forest to the west. The tepee was still there. It did not seem very much changed to Baree. And rising from the ground in front of the tepee was what had come to him faintly on the still air—the smoke of a small fire. Over that fire was bending a person, and it did not strike Baree as amazing, or at all unexpected, that this person should have two great shining braids down her back. He whined, and at his whine the person grew a little rigid, and turned slowly.

Even then it seemed quite the most natural thing in the world that it should be Nepeese, and none other. He had lost her yesterday. Today he had found her. And in answer to his whine there came a sobbing cry straight out of the soul of the Willow.

Carvel found them there a few minutes later, the dog's head hugged close up against the Willow's breast, and the Willow was crying—crying like a little child, her face hidden from him on Baree's neck. He did not interrupt them, but waited; and as he waited something in the sobbing voice and the stillness of the forest seemed to whisper to him a bit of the story of the burned cabin and the two graves, and the meaning of the Call that had come to Baree from out of the south.

Chapter XVII

That night there was a new campfire in the open. It was not a small fire, built with the fear that other eyes might see it, but a fire that sent its flames high. In the glow of it stood Carvel. And as the fire had changed from that small smoldering heap over which the Willow had cooked dinner, so Carvel, the officially dead outlaw, had changed. The beard was gone from his face; he had thrown off his caribou-skin coat; his sleeves were rolled up to the elbows, and there was a wild flush in his face that was not altogether the tanning of wind and sun and storm, and a glow in his eyes that had not been there for five years, perhaps never before. His eyes were on Nepeese. She sat in the firelight, leaning a little toward the blaze, her wonderful hair glowing warmly in the dash of it. Carvel did not move while she was in that attitude. He seemed scarcely to breathe. The glow in his eyes grew deeper—the worship of a man for a woman. Suddenly Nepeese turned and caught him before he could turn his gaze. There was nothing to hide in her own eyes. Like her face, they were flushed with a new hope and a new gladness. Carvel sat down beside her on the birch log, and in his hand he took one of her thick braids and crumpled it as he talked. At their feet, watching them, lay Baree.

"Tomorrow or the next day I am going to Lac Bain," he said, a hard and bitter note back of the gentle worship of his voice. "I will not come back until I have—killed him."

The Willow looked straight into the fire. For a time there was a silence broken only by the crackling of the flames, and in that silence Carvel's fingers weaved in and out of the silken strands of the Willow's hair. His thoughts flashed back. What a chance he had missed that day on Bushy McTaggart's trap-line—if he had only known! His jaws set hard as he saw in the red-hot heart of the fire the mental pictures of the day when the Factor from Lac Bain had killed Pierrot. She had told him the whole story. Her flight. Her plunge to what she had thought was certain death in the icy torrent of the chasm. Her miraculous escape from the waters—and how she was discovered, nearly dead, by Tuboa, the toothless old Cree whom Pierrot out of pity had allowed to hunt in part of his domain. He felt within himself the tragedy and the horror of the one terrible hour in which the sun had gone out of the world for the Willow, and in the flames he could see faithful old Tuboa as he called on his last strength to bear Nepeese over the long miles that lay between the chasm and his cabin; he caught shifting visions of the weeks that followed in that cabin, weeks of hunger and of intense cold in which the Willow's life hung by a single thread. And at last, when the snows were deepest, Tuboa had died. Carvel's fingers clenched in the strands of the Willow's braid. A deep breath rose out of his chest, and he said, staring deep into the fire:

"Tomorrow I will go to Lac Bain."

For a moment Nepeese did not answer. She, too, was looking into the fire. Then she said:

"Tuboa meant to kill him when the spring came, and he could travel. When Tuboa died I knew that it was I who must kill him. So I came, with Tuboa's gun. It was fresh loaded—yesterday. And—Nepeese, Jeem—she looked up at him, a triumphant glow in her eyes as she added in a whisper—"You will not go to Lac Bain. I have sent a messenger."

"A messenger?"

"Yes, Oookimow Jeem—a messenger. Two days ago. I sent word that I had not died, but was here—waiting for him —and that I would be lakwao now, his wife. Oo-oo, he will come. Oookimow Jeem—he will come fast. And you shall not kill him. Non!" She smiled into his face, and the throb of Carvel's heart was like a dream. "The gun is loaded," she said softly. "I will shoot."

"Two days ago," said Carvel. "And from Lac Bain it is—"

"He will be here tomorrow." Nepeese answered him. "Tomorrow, as the sun goes down, he will enter the clearing. I know. My blood has been singing it all day. Tomorrow—tomorrow—for he will travel fast, Oookimow Jeem. Yes, he will come fast."

Carvel had bent his head. The soft tresses gripped in his fingers were crushed to his lips. The Willow, looking again into the fire, did not see. But she felt—and her soul was beating like the wings of a bird.

"Oookimow Jeem," she whispered—a breath, a flutter of the lips so soft that Carvel heard no sound.

If old Tuboa had been there that night it is possible he would have read strange warnings in the winds that whispered now and then softly in the tree-tops. It was such a night; a night when the Red Gods whisper among themselves, a carnival of glory in which even the dipping shadows and the high stars seemed to quiver with the life of a potent language. It is barely possible that old Tuboa, with his ninety years behind him, would have learned something, or that at least he would have suspected a thing which Carvel in his youth and confidence did not see. Tomorrow—he will come tomorrow! The Willow, exulting, or at all unexpected, that this person should have two great shining braids down her back. He whined, and at his whine the person grew a little rigid, and turned slowly.

It was midnight when the big moon stood full above the little open in the forest. In the tepee the Willow was sleeping. In the balsam shadow back from the fire slept Baree, and still farther back in the edge of a spruce thicket slept Carvel. Dog and man were tired. They had traveled far and fast that day, and they heard no sound.

But they had traveled neither so far nor so fast as Bushy McTaggart. Between sunrise and midnight he had come forty miles when he strode out into the clearing where Pierrot's cabin had stood. Twice from the edge of the forest he had called; and now, when he found no answer, he stood under the light of the moon and listened. Nepeese was to be here—waiting. He was tired, but exhaustion could not still the fire that burned in his blood. It had been blazing all day, and now—so near its realization and its triumph—the old passion was like a drunken wine in his veins. Some where, near where he stood, Nepeese was waiting for him, waiting for him. Once again he called, his heart beating in a fierce anticipation as he listened. There was no answer. And then for a thrilling instant his breath stopped. He sniffed the air—and there came to him faintly the smell of smoke.

With the first instinct of the forest man he fronted the wind that was but a faint breath under the starlit skies. He did not call again, but hastened across the clearing. Nepeese was off there—somewhere—sleeping beside her fire, and out of him there rose a low cry of exultation. He came to the edge of the forest; chance directed his steps to the overgrown trail; he followed it, and the smoke smell came stronger to his nostrils.

It was the forest man's instinct, too, that added the element of caution to his advance. That, and the utter stillness of the night. He broke no sticks under his feet. He disturbed the brush so quietly that it made no sound. When he came at last to the little open where Carvel's fire was still sending a spiral of spruce-scented smoke up into the air it was with a stealth that failed even to rouse Baree. Perhaps, deep down in him, there smoldered an old suspicion; perhaps it was because he wanted to come to her while she was sleeping. The sight of the tepee made his heart throb faster. It was light so day where it stood in the moonlight, and he saw hanging outside it a few bits of woman's apparel. He advanced soft-footed as a fox and stood a moment with his hand on the cloth flap at the wigwam door, his head bent forward to catch the merest breath of sound. He could hear her breathing. For an instant his face turned so that the moonlight struck his eyes. They were adame with a mad fire. Then, still very quietly, he drew aside the flap at the door.

It could not have been sound that roused Baree, hidden in the black balsam shadow a dozen paces away. Perhaps it was scent. His nostrils twitched first; then he awoke. For a few seconds his eyes glared at the bent figure in the tepee door. He knew that it was not Carvel. The old smell—the man-beast's smell, his nostrils like a hated poison. He sprang to his feet and stood with his lips smirking back slowly from his long fangs. McTaggart had disappeared. From inside the tepee there came a sound; a sudden movement of bodies, a startled ejaculation of one awakening from sleep—and then a cry, a low, half-smothered, frightened cry, and in response to that cry Baree shot out from under the balsam with a sound in his throat that had in it the note of death.

In the edge of the spruce thicket Carvel rolled uneasily. Strange sounds were rousing him, cries that in his exhaustion came to him as if in a dream. At last he sat up, and then in sudden horror leaped to his feet and rushed toward the tepee. Nepeese was in the open, crying the name she had given him—"Oookimow Jeem—Oookimow—Jeem—Oookimow Jeem—"

She was standing there white and slim, her eyes with the blaze of the stars in them, and when she saw Carvel she flung out her arms to him, still crying: "Oookimow Jeem—Oo-oo, Oookimow Jeem—"

In the tepee he heard the rage of a beast, the moaning cries of a man. He forgot that it was only last night he had come, and with a cry he swept the Willow to his breast, and the Willow's arms tightened around his neck as she moaned:

"Oookimow Jeem—it is the man-beast

Then, Still Very Quietly, He Drew Aside the Flap.

—in there! It is the man-beast from Lac Bain—and Baree—"

Truth flashed upon Carvel, and he caught Nepeese up in his arms and ran away with her from the sounds that had grown sickening and horrible. In the spruce thicket he put her feet once more to the ground. Her arms were still tight around his neck; he felt the wild terror of her body as it thrashed against him; her breath was sobbing, and her eyes were on his face. He drew her closer, and suddenly he crushed his face down close against hers and felt for an instant the warm thrill of her lips against his own. And he heard the whisper, soft and trembling:

"Oo-oo, Oookimow Jeem—"

When Carvel returned to the fire, alone, his Colt in his hand, Baree was in front of the tepee waiting for him. Carvel picked up a burning brand and entered the wigwam. When he came out his face was white. He tossed the brand in the fire and went back to Nepeese. He had wrapped her in his blankets, and now he knelt down beside her and put his arms about her.

"He is dead, Nepeese."

"Dead Oookimow Jeem?"

"Yes. Baree killed him."

She did not seem to breathe. Gently, with his lips in her hair, Carvel whispered his plans for their paradise.

"No one will know, my sweetheart. Tonight I will bury him and burn the tepee. Tomorrow we will start for Nelson House, where there is a Missioner. And after that—we will come back—and I will build a new cabin where the old one burned. Do you love me, ka sakahet?"

"Ooi—yes—Oookimow Jeem—I love you—"

Suddenly there came an interruption. Baree at last was giving his cry of triumph. It rose to the stars; it waivered over the roofs of the forests and filled the quiet clearing with a wolfish howl of exultation, of achievement, of vengeance fulfilled. Its echoes died slowly away, and silence came again.

A great peace whispered in the soft breath of the tree tops. Out of the north came the mating call of a loon, about Carvel's shoulders the Willow's arms crept closer. And Carvel, out of his heart, thanked God.

STATE FAIRTHE BIGGEST THRILL
IN SOME TIME

In the first place, I'm always ready for a little change around about September. And I just jump into my driver and point her for the State Fair Detroitway. Been doing it for 17 years and going to do it again this September. Last year I got the thrill of my life. The stunner girl kept looking at me and I kept wondering who she was and where I'd seen her before. Finally she said: "Joe, don't you recognize me in this new dress I got down town at noon?" Doggoned if it weren't my wife!

PROGRESS OF THE GREATER

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Yoder and son Benny returned Tuesday morning from Detroit where they had been spending a few days visiting their daughter Virginia, at a hospital there. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Bert Mitchell of Lansing, who will be here for a couple of weeks visit among old friends. Mrs. Mitchell has been in West Branch caring for her mother, who is ill.

A leak in one of the large water mains near the pumping station necessitated the shutting off of the water Tuesday morning and the city was without water until Wednesday noon. Fortunately there occurred no fires during the time, as the town was without fire protection except for the chemical department and in regions where the new fire engine could reach the river with its intake pipe. Everything is all right again, however, and no harm done except for the short period of inconvenience.

Huckleberries are coming in fairly well, although the crop isn't as great as it was predicted earlier in the season, due to a number of frosts and also to the drought last month.

Eagle Point, on Lake Margrethe is a most desirable location for summer homes. Nine fine lots for sale at that place. See O. P. Schumann for particulars.

His theological works—as issued by himself—have been published by the Houghton Mifflin Co. in most modern translation from the original Latin, in the Rotch Edition of 32 volumes. The first twenty give the spiritual sense of Genesis and Exodus as understood in Heaven; and volumes 26, 27, 28 give likewise the spiritual sense of the Book of Revelation.

Volume 29, Marriage Love, views from the union of the Divine Love and the Divine Wisdom the Law of Sex throughout all creation. It shows the crown and jewel of the Christian Religion, the union of one with one only. Price $2.00.

Volumes 30, 31, 32, contain a full statement of the True Christian Religion as revealed from Heaven. $3.00 the set.

The whole 32 volumes in half-morocco at $125; in buckram, $40.

The following are the best introductory books to the Revelations of SWEDENBORG. They are in large print, bound in buckram, and contain from 260 to 485 pages.

THE DIVINE PROVIDENCE, which governs the Universe and the Heavens and the Hells, and the least as well as the greatest of all things in creation; and in the everyday life of man. $1.25

THE DIVINE LOVE AND WISDOM, the profoundest book and revelation concerning God and His Creation ever written, first published in Latin at Amsterdam 1763; along with this is the "Intercourse Between the Soul and the Body" first published in Latin at London 1769. $1.25

Price of all three at one time, including postage $2.75

Who Was Swedenborg?

Emanuel Swedenborg, the son of a bishop, was the great Swedish scientist, philosopher and theologian, whose vast range caused Emerson to term him the mastodon of scholars. Dr. Parkes Cadman recently named him the Universal Genius. Officially connected, by appointment of the King, with the great mining industry of Sweden, he mastered all the sciences of his time, and wrote the most useful books on metallurgy, minerals, geology, astronomy, and the human brain. His life search was for the human soul. How his spiritual senses were opened, after he was 50 years of age, that he might reveal the human soul, the life after death, and the Bible itself, may be read in the above named, uplifting, useful books.
